ABSTRACT

This bibliography gathers and organizes literature from the past 25 years about the many types of library users for whom English is a second language and the various resources available to them. The work is arranged in the text by broad subject areas consisting of 25 categories: Academic Libraries; Asians (Services to); Automated Services; Bibliographies and Checklists; Bilingualism in the Library; Children's Services; Collection Management; Community Analysis; General; Hispanics (Library Services to); Intercultural Interaction; Library Education; Mass Media; Media; Migrants (Services to); Native Populations (Services to); Professional Concerns; Public Libraries; Recruitment of Librarians; Reference; School Libraries; Special Libraries; Technical Services; User Education; and Young Adult Services. Works are listed alphabetically in each of these categories, which are in turn listed alphabetically in the Table of Contents. Limited cross indexing is provided, but the reader is advised to consult the Table of Contents for related subject headings that may have other useful entries. Some older entries are included because of the relative merit or notoriety of the particular item. (SD)

Introduction

Library users for whom English is a second Language (ESL) can take many forms and are found in many different types of libraries. This bibliography is an attempt to gather and organize the literature on this topic. This work is arranged in broad subject areas which include different types of libraries, different groups for which English is not a native language, as well a s a variety of aspects of librarianship which are involved in meeting the needs of these ESL users. Limited cross indexing is provided. However, the reader is advised to consult the Table of Contents for related subject headings which may prove to have other useful entries.

This bibliography was compiled in May 1989 and provides retrospective coverage for approximately the past twenty-five years. Older entries are included in some instances due the reletive merit or noteriety of the particular item.
